Sources in Germany

German church records are a rich source of genealogical information. These records often pre-date civil records. The main religious denominations in Germany are: Roman Catholic, Evangelical (Lutheran), and Evangelical Reformed. The Catholic Church has been active in what is today Germany since the 5th Century. The Evangelical Church (Lutheran Church) was officially established in 1531. Protestants in Germany who accepted the teachings of John Calvin belong to the Evangelical Reform Church. All three of these denominations kept detailed records of their membership.

What do German Church Records Include?

Most German Church records (Kirchenbucher) record Baptisms (Taufen), Marriages (Heiraten) and Burials (Begrabnisse).

How Far Back to German Church Records Exist?

Most Catholic Church records begin in 1563; Evangelical (Lutheran) in 1540 and Evangelical Reformed in 1550.

Many old records were destroyed during the Thirty Years War (1618-1648).

What Information Do I Need to Know to Find a German Church Record?

Since German Church records are rarely indexed, you will need to know the exact name of the village in which your ancestor resided.

This information can often be found in United States Church records, in ship passenger lists, in family diaries or Bibles, on some death certificates or in obituaries.

Where Can I find German Church Records?

Most original German records are maintained by the local parishes. Fortunately, many local congregations have permitted the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, Utah to microfilm these records. To see if the Family History Library maintains a copy of the church records you are looking for, consult their webpage at <http://www.familysearch.org/>

Choose the tab at the top of the page marked "Library," now choose the tab marked "Family History Library Catalog."
